ANNEXURE D: TERMS OF REFERENCE

Introduction

Health systems based on knowledge and availability of plants with medicinal properties are part of the ancient wisdom and culture of India. Such knowledge has been passed within and across generations, and developed and amended with the benefit of scientific advancement. Among ancient civilisations, India has been known to be rich repository of medicinal plants. The forest in India is the principal repository of large number of medicinal and aromatic plants, which are largely collected as raw materials for manufacture of drugs and perfumery products. About 8,000 herbal remedies have been codified in AYUSH systems in INDIA. Recently, WHO estimated that 80 percent of people worldwide rely on herbal medicines for some aspect of their primary health care needs. According to WHO, around 21,000 plant species have the potential for being used as medicinal plants. Medicinal plants are considered as a rich resources of ingredients which can be used in drug development either pharmacopoeial, non- pharmacopoeial or synthetic drugs. Moreover, some plants are considered as important source of nutrition and as a result of that they are recommended for their therapeutic values. Due to increasing export demand, dependence of the local people on the herbal flora and their implicit faith in the old tradition of Ayurvedic medicine would go a long way in exploiting the wild plants for commercial return and in expanding research activities to gain productive results. Hence Overharvesting, loss of habitat, increasing urbanization and shrinking forest resource base have been causing irreversible loss of medicinal plant population in the natural habitat, resulting in decline in the volume of raw materials.

Pt. Khushilal Sharma Government (Autonomous) Ayurveda College & Institute, Bhopal has an area of around 30 acre as a natural forest other than the 05 acre of Herbal garden of institute. Pt.
